

CLIMB FOR AUTISM

SUPPORTING THOSE WITH AUTISM IN SAN DIEGO

THE CHO-OYU CLIMB AUGUST 30 - OCTOBER 6, 2016

Farzin Fallah is a mountaineer/climber with a teenage son with autism. His son Matthew is a junior at Westview High School in San Diego.

Farzin will climb the 6th highest mountain in the world, Cho-Oyu in Nepal, to raise awareness and funds for autism programs.

Every penny raised through the event will go directly to funding local autism programs that enable young autistic adults to reach their full potential as contributing members of society. Follow Farzin's journey at: climbingforautism.org.

HELP FUND CRITICAL AUTISM PROGRAMS

The Climb will benefit local nonprofit National Foundation for Autism Research (NFAR), who are dedicated to helping individuals with autism gain the skills and opportunities needed to lead a better quality of life.

Currently, 85% of young adults with autism are unemployed.

Farzin's journey mirrors what he hopes for young adults with ASD - a climb to greater independence & opportunities.

Help Farzin make a difference by donating today at:

